Western Energy Market Regional Issues Forum: Independent Power Producers and Marketers Sector Liaison

November 4, 2026

My name is Jasmie Guan, and I am writing to express interest in serving as the liaison for the Independent Power Producers and Marketers (IPPM) sector of the Western Energy Markets Regional Issues Forum (RIF). NextEra Energy Resources is an active participant as a generation owner, operator, and scheduling coordinator in the CAISO's Western Energy Imbalance Market (WEIM) and the newly launched Extended Day Ahead Market (EDAM). Specifically, within CAISO's Balancing Area, NextEra Energy Resources operates nearly 8GWs of resources that participate in EDAM. As such, NextEra Energy Resources has vested interest in the IPPM sector within the RIF.

I am currently a Senior Manager, Regulatory Affairs at NextEra Energy Resources. In my role, I monitor and participate in ISO/RTO stakeholder initiatives across CAISO and Southwest Power Pool's RTO-Expansion (SPP West) for NextEra Energy Resources' development, power origination, transmission interconnection, power marketing, and operational business units. In CAISO, I actively participate in western market issues and infrastructure development issues, including EDAM, market design, resource adequacy, transmission and interconnection policy, and broader regional market developments. For example, I am an active participant in the Market and Infrastructure Policy Roadmap processes and have submitted proposals for consideration. My participation extended to the IPPM, where I helped provide input on the sector's priorities. I have eight years of energy sector experience. Prior to joining NextEra Energy Resources, I held regulatory affairs positions at AES Clean Energy and CAISO.

As the western electricity market rapidly evolves, particularly with the transition into the Regional Organization for Western Energy (ROWE), it will be especially important for the RIF to consider any transitional issues before it officially sunsets at the end of 2027. I believe the RIF is an important venue for market participants to identify emerging issues, exchange perspectives, and provide meaningful stakeholder feedback. I am particularly interested in coordinating engagement across the IPPM sector through the end of the RIF.

I would approach the liaison role as a facilitator for the IPPM sector than my individual company. I would actively work to solicit diverse perspectives and encourage participation with varying viewpoints, knowing that there are numerous organizations with different business models and interests. As a regulatory affairs professional, one of my core responsibilities is to develop an action and advocacy plan based on varying perspectives throughout my internal company. I believe these soft skills are transferrable into the IPPM liaison role.

I am an active participant within the IPPM sector itself and believe my transition into the role will be with ease given my familiarity with the sector.

Please feel free to reach out with any questions and I appreciate your consideration.

Thank you,

Jasmie Guan
